

AMERICAN WOODEN SHIPBUILDING IN WORLD WAR ONE.SHIPS LIST 224.

by N.L. McKellar, BNRA Tamworth (NSW).

When to bring the American Merchant Marine up to what was considered an appropriate level, existing steel yards were fully committed, attention was naturally given to the possibility of using the capacity of those yards which could build wooden ships. Three factors influenced this decision - the availability of labour on the North Atlantic Coast, the unlimited wood resources of the South Atlantic, Gulf, and North Pacific Coasts, and the shipbuilding tradition of Maine. It is said that the latter weighed very heavily with the U.S. President of the day, whose love for the wooden ships of this area was well known.

In considering the types of ships to be built, as well as the yards to which contracts should be allocated, attention was naturally paid to existing plans of old-established yards. The first design approved by the Emergency Fleet Corporation was known as the HOUGH type, based on two vessels, C.A. SMITH and JOHANNA SMITH, built by Kruse and Banks for the C.A. Smith Lumber Co., to replace two steel hulls requisitioned by the E.F.C. (Incidentally, this yard completed the first wooden ship for the E.F.C. - the NORTH BEND, in 1918.) The plans were altered somewhat by the E.F.C. and following discussions on the suitability of the type, Theodore Ferris, a well known naval architect, was commissioned to design what ultimately became the main type, known as the FERRIS type.

As the programme developed, it became necessary to authorise shipyards to build vessels of a type for which they were particularly suited. Thus by the end of the programme, some 12 or 13 types were authorised, apart from the barge types which were later included.

The programme ran into many difficulties. The first was that there were a number of yards which could provide adequate timber for hulls, but had no contacts with suppliers of machinery. In fact, this difficulty was the rock on which the programme ultimately foundered. After initial delays, it was found, as a complication, that yards would have, for example, a surplus of timber sizes for beams, keelsons and so on, and no timber suitable for planking. In the early stages, availability of timber influenced the allocation of contracts.

By January 1918, the E.F.C. had been able to arrange 65 contracts for complete ships, and 298 contracts for hulls for which the E.F.C. undertook to find the engines. (Perhaps the foregoing would have been clearer had I written 'contracts for 65 complete ships and for 298 hulls.') The provision of engines proved a greater difficulty than was anticipated and in the long run, a number of hulls originally intended to be engined were completed as barges, either for the E.F.C. or for private owners who purchased the unfinished hulls from the E.F.C. In the meantime, however, the position had been made even more difficult by the allocation of still further contracts so that at the time of its maximum optimism, the E.F.C. planned to get in the vicinity of a thousand ships under this programme. (See below under 'STATISTICS' for some note on the difficulty of ascertaining exact figures.)

When the Armistice was signed, it had already become apparent that the wooden ships would not play the important part which had been envisaged for them in earlier planning. There followed much re-negotiation of contracts, and widespread cancellations. The extent of such cancellations will become apparent as the output of each yard is considered.

As steel ships became available in the immediate post-war period, the wooden ships were gradually placed in lay-up sites and the E.F.C. commenced its efforts to dispose of them. A number were sold to American owners and continued to ply under the U.S. flag for varying periods. However, in September 1922 a bulk deal was made with G.D. Perry, of San Francisco, for the sale of 226 ships to the Western Marine & Salvage Co., for scrap, with the option of using a limited number in the coastal trades for short term contracts. (The abbreviation WM&S for Western Marine & Salvage Co. is very frequently used in the listing which follows.) Of the 226 ships in this deal, 211 were laid up at Claremont, Va., 13 at Orange, Texas, and 2 at Beaumont, Texas. Most of them were scrapped in 1923, but some were not dealt with until 1924/5 and a few lasted even longer. Where the year of scrapping is definitely known, it is shown in the listing.

With the exception of some which lasted as barges, and a few under foreign flags, all the wood and composite ships were gone by the beginning of World War II.

Other bulk deals of interest which were made by the E.F.C. included the sale of 28 barges to the Southern Transportation Co. in 2/1920, 25 completed ships to Brooks S.S. in 1/1920 (though they were repossessed in 6/1920 when the company defaulted on its mortgage payments), and 75 incomplete hulls to R.J. McGahie of San Francisco in 3/1922. A deal with the Ship Construction and Trading Co. in 8/1921 for the sale of 201 ships at $2100 each fell through, but is interesting as an indication of the then current market value of these ships.

It is to be noted that many of the vessels sold for scrap were not broken up in the usual way. After being stripped of engines and moveable items, together with valuable metals, the hulls were burnt for the recovery of remaining metals at low tide. Even this became unprofitable in the end, and a great many were merely abandoned on mud flats in various harbours, or in backwaters of navigable rivers. The 'shabby sisterhood of the sea' gained an enormous number of members at this period. John Lyman of Washington has told me of an extreme case of this nature - a vessel which wound up on the banks of the Potomac River and was finally destroyed by fire in 1949.

STATISTICS. In dealing with the various Governmental building programmes of the First War, I have tried to make the starting point the actual statistics of ships built. Unfortunately I have been able to get reliable statistics in only a very few instances. The U.S. wooden ship programme is a good example of the difficulties encountered. One would like to start off by saying that 'such and such a number of ships was built', and then go on to account for all the vessels in the total. The impossibility of doing this is apparent when one consults what might be termed 'sources'. One would expect that the figures issued by the Emergency Fleet Corporation would be accurate, yet even the famous report by Charles Piez contradicts itself in many ways. This report was issued as at 30th April 1919. In it, we find, at page 49, a list of the total contracts, the figure being quoted as 917. A table on pages 119-121 of the same report gives a detailed breakdown of these figures, but puts the total at 993. Again, page 49 shows cancellations at the figure of 260, while the table on pages 119-121 says it is 362. As against the totals of 917 and 993 mentioned, the report of the U.S. Shipping Board, which was the parent body of the E.F.C., quotes, in its 1921/22 issue a total figure (wood, composite, barges and tugs) of 1057.

In the light of the foregoing, I have used as a basis the detailed figures shown on pages 119-121 of the Piez Report, and have amended the figures where it has been definitely ascertained that the output of any yard differed from the contract figures.

In a few cases, it will be seen that I express doubt as to whether a vessel was or was not actually completed. This is because I have been unable to get evidence of documentation. In some cases, more especially in those yards which contracted to build hulls only (without engines), it often happened that the hull was completed and laid aside. Many such hulls were taken up by McGahie as described above. On the other hand, I have come across several instances in which a vessel was documented without having been completed, and a few cases where names were changed between completion and documentation.

Anyone who can show definitely that there should be any re-assessment of my conclusions in this matter is cordially invited to get in touch with me.

SCOPE OF THE LIST. The list which follows attempts to reconcile the output of each yard with the contracts undertaken, and to show the actual output of each yard. Where a vessel has been completed other than as a fully powered steamship (or motorship), no attempt has been made to trace her subsequent history. Members interested in sailing vessels can undoubtedly contribute much in this manner - I'm a steamship man myself, and schooners and barquentines are not in my territory. Where a vessel was completed as a barge, I have merely noted the fact, again because barges are outside my sphere. Where a vessel has been renamed before completion, I have recorded the fact where known. Vessels built under the barge contracts have been included for two reasons. The first is that it is important to distinguish between those vessels DESIGNED as barges, and those vessels which were designed as steamships and merely completed as barges. The second reason is that, no doubt due to wartime pressures, and the immediate post-war confusion, Lloyds Registers in the period 1919-1922 contain many misleading items. A vessel may be described as a steamer in one Register, as a barge in the next, and may be omitted entirely from the next issue without any reason being given. As with the sailing ships, I have made no attempt to follow through the histories of the barges, either those designed as such or those which were finished as such. It is usually accepted that these barges were 'non-sea-going'.

I have included Official Numbers where known, because there are some quaint habits of duplication of names in the U.S. programme. Where anyone can let me have official numbers I lack, I would be glad to hear. For my own purposes, I have recorded the engine suppliers for the steamships, but if anyone has access to American Bureau 'RECORD' s for this period, I would very much like some help in finding many missing engine details.

This list is not in the standard BNRS form because it is an attempt to cover the whole of one section of a nation's war effort. The ships included very rarely require an 'outline career' as is usual in BNRA lists.

Finally, may I say that I realise that this list is not 100% complete, but I think it is the first time anyone has tried to get all these vessels into order for publication. It would never have progressed so far had it not been for the help of a few fellow-workers. Among these I would like to mention John Lyman, of Washington D.C., whose searches in official archives have been long and frustrating, though invaluable; Span Ashdown, of New Orleans, who has put his own records at my disposal and who has sent me countless photostats of documents not available outside the U.S.A.; Vic West, of North Bend, Ore, whose local knowledge of Pacific Coast matters has helped greatly, and last but by no means least, Fred Bland, the stalwart in charge of the World Ship Society's Central Record, who can be relied on to fill the gaps and on whom I have leaned heavily.

May I appeal to any member who can improve this list in any way to get in touch with me so that by our joint efforts we can really make it complete for all time.

Now to get onto the listing of the outputs of the yards.

G.M.STANDIFER CONSTRUCTION CO., This firm built at two yards - Portland, Ore., and Vancouver, Wash. Their contract was for 14 Ferris hulls and 12 Ballin hulls, all without engines. Of these, 1 Ferris and 6 Ballin hulls were cancelled.

However, both designs underwent modification at this yard. The Ferris type, though completed to specified dimensions, had twin screws instead of the normal single screw. The Ballin hulls, designed as composite vessels, were completed by this yard entirely of wooden construction. Of the actual output, all the (nominally) BALLIN type came from the Vancouver yard, and the (nominally) FERRIS type from the Portland yard except for KANGI, built at Vancouver.

AUSTRALIAN CONTRACTS. As mentioned, two yards built for the Australian Government. These orders were placed before the U.S. entered the war, but escaped requisitioning as they were for wooden ships and not steel. Consultations between the Governments resulted in the cancellation of Patterson McDonald's E.F.C. contract so that that yard could concentrate on the Australian orders. Sloans finished their orders and then built for E.F.C.

CETHANA & CHALLAMBA remained under these owners until the end, CULBURRA having been sold to Santa Cruz Oil Co in 1935.

DESIGNS AND DETAILS. In the foregoing, hulls have been referred to by their popular 'type' names. Each had an official E.F.C. design number. Details are as follows:

EFC DESIGN 1001 - FERRIS TYPE: Wood, single screw, 3588 tons dwt. Standard dimensions 268 x 45'2" x 26'. Single deck. Triple expansion engines 188 n.h.p., amidships. Three island type. Slight variations between vessels of yellow pine (Atlantic and Southern yards) and those of Douglas Fir (Pacific yards.)

E.F.C. DESIGN 1003 - 'HOUGH' type. Wood, twin screw, 4005 tons dwt. 288' x 45' x 28'. Tween decks in all holds. Triple expansion engines 198 n.h.p. situated amidships. Three island 'long bridge' type. Midship bulkhead full length of ship.

E.F.C. DESIGN 1004 - 'PENINSULA' type. wood, single screw, 4000 tons dwt. 269' x 48' x 27'6". Single deck, small tween deck in bridge structure. Double reduction geared turbines specified, though a number were completed with the standard 188 n.h.p. triplr expansion sets used in the Ferris type. Engines situated slightly aft of midships. Three island type.

E.F.C. DESIGN 1005 - 'GRAY'S HARBOR' type. Wood, twin screw, 4000 tons dwt. 274'6" x 49' x 28'1". Tween-decker. Triple expansion engines 324 n.h.p. situated amidships. Three island type.

NOTE: Four of this yard's output I have classified as WARD type - a designation applied to them by 'International Marine Engineering'. I confess I cannot find any basic differences between these four and the other output of the yard, so this may be an incorrect classification. It does not appear as a separate design in the E.F.C. records. The name may stem from the fact that the Superintendent of the Gray's Harbor yard was Monty Ward, who undoubtedly had a hand in the design.

If anyone can clear this up I would be glad to hear.

E.F.C. DESIGN 1006 - 'DAUGHERTY' type. Wood, single screw, 4700 tons dwt. 300' x 48' x 28'6". Tween-decker. Triple expansion engines 296 n.h.p., situated aft.

NOTE: The DAUGHERTYS built by National S.B. Co., of Orange, Tex., had a deadweight capacity of 5000 tons on the same dimensions and were given a special design number - 1056.

E.F.C. DESIGN 1007 - 'LAKE AND OCEAN' type. Wood, single screw, 3500 tons dwt. 250' x 43'6" x 22'6". Single deck. Triple expansion engine 189 n.h.p. situated aft.

E.F.C. DESIGN 1008 - 'ALLEN' type. Wood, 1 screw, 3650 dwt. 274'6" x 44'9" x 26'4". Single deck. Triple expansion engines 188 n.h.p. situated amidships. Three island type.

E.F.C. DESIGN 1009 - 'McCLELLAND' type. Composite, single screw, 3500 tons dwt. 270' x 45' x 24'3". Tween-decker. Triple expansion engines, 181 n.h.p., situated amidships. Three island type.

NOTE: The McCLELLANDS built by Terry SB Co and Mobile S.B. Co. were given a different design number - 1010 - yet as far as I can discover, the only difference was that these had a slight rake to the masts and funnel, as against the completely uprights of the other yards' output.

E.F.C. DESIGN 1011 - 'BALLIN' type. Composite, single screw, 4000 tons dwt. 285' x 45' x 26'. Two decks. Triple expansion engines 211 n.h.p. situated amidships. Three island type.

NOTE: This design was later amended, and the last three ships built by Supple Ballin Co. (DEVA, DERTONA & DIANA) were built to DESIGN No. 1102 - with 2' greater beam and an increased deadweight capacity, by 505 tons, to the total of 4505 tons.

E.F.C. DESIGN 1084 - 'CONTINENTAL' type. Wood, single screw, dwt unknown. 198'6" x 36'6" x 20'. Single decker. (None completed - only vessel of this type was HASTNAI which emerged as a barge.)

E.F.C. DESIGN 1065 - PACIFIC AMERICAN FISHERIES type. Wood, single screw, 3500 tons dwt. 268'4" x 46' x 26'. Tween-decker. Triple expansion engines 180 n.h.p., situated amidships. Three island type.

BROXTON & SNOQUALMIE of the Puget Sound Co's output are described as GEARY type. They certainly differ from the rest of this yard's output and I would appreciate reasons and details.

The end.
